

Beach Baubles

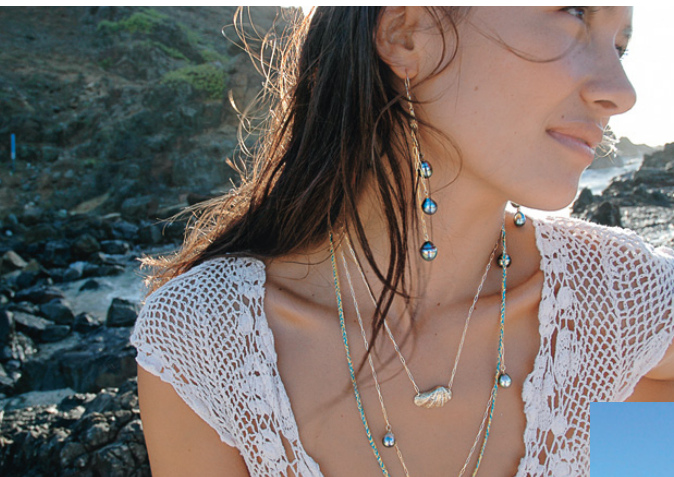

Jewelry designers Sara Beltran and Jennifer Binney will grace our shores with their ocean-inspired pieces for a private showing in July. Beltran, a saucy Mexican artist, crafts her bohemian collection Dezso (Latin for “desire”) in Jaipur, India. The 18k gold necklaces and bracelets merge ocean finds such as fossilized shark teeth and shells with polki diamonds, and kyanite stones sourced from India and Mexico. When asked what she wears most from her collection, she says, “always my shark tooth gold studs.” Hawaiian-born Binney—a UCSB graduate—produces hand-hammered gold and silver bangles and shell rings for her line, Hinu Jewelry. The former Roxy surf wahine uses puka shells and black pearls—treasures she finds in Hawaii, Tahiti, and while swimming on her lunch break in her Lanikai, Oahu backyard—to accent her coveted bracelets and earrings.

—SAMANTHA BURKE

DEZSO, dezsosara.com. HINU JEWELRY, hinujewelry.com.

PHOTOGRAPHS: TOP, JENNIFER BINNEY; BOTTOM, COURTESY OF MIKOH

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT: Hinu pearl drop earrings, ($1,600), Tavarua clam shell necklace ($520), pearl drop necklace ($1,400), seashell rings ($275 each), Sunrise shell ring ($450) and coral wrap ring ($450). Dezso's fossilized shell with polki diamond ($2,500), polki gold and diamond necklace $11,000), anadara carved stone gold bangles ($615 each).

Swimsuit Sisters

California girls, Oleema and Kalani Miller grew up wearing bikinis in San Clemente with the ocean as their backyard. Kalani's a recent UCSB grad and now, the twentysomething siblings are heating up our beaches with their own swimwear line, Mikoh.

HOW HAS YOUR CHILDHOOD INFLUENCED YOUR LOVE FOR BIKINIS?

OLEEMA Our dad, Jim, grew up surfing Malibu and Zuma breaks in the '70s and passed the surf-gene to us. WHICH STYLE ARE YOU WEARING FROM YOUR COLLECTION RIGHT NOW?

KALANI I'm into the Lucas one piece in coral. It's ultra girly with tied sides—but definitely still sexy. OLEEMA I'm all about the bandeaus, like the James top I wear with the Jasper bottom.

FAVORITE SANTA BARBARA BEACH?

KALANI Hammonds. It's within walking distance from where we live, and I love how private and serene it is.

—S.B.
MIKOH SWIMWEAR mikohswimwear.com.

Lucas one piece, $185.